

FEATURES ZONE

It's No Squeeze For Chris Difford To Do The Write Thing...

British songwriting legend Chris Difford is one half of hit partnership Difford and Tilbrook – labelled “the new Lennon and McCartney” for their timeless songs penned for Squeeze.

Lucy Boulter caught up with Chris to find out about his latest charity projects and his self-confessed endless love of songwriting...

The Smiling Sessions...

Chris Difford is also lined up to take part in a recording for The Smiling Sessions, a charity that hosts sing-alongs for the elderly in care homes and community centres.

Lockdown has made this kind of support more vital than ever, given the power of music in helping and engaging the elderly. And for Chris, it's personal; he and his wife, Louise, are doing their best to stay connected with her parents during Covid, as they are both cared for in a home.

“People in care homes need some expression. They need some togetherness. They're probably feeling quite fragile and distant from stuff, so I think they need a community – and hopefully some of these songs can lend themselves towards that. I think it's a pretty worthy cause.

Social

Follow us for all the latest news!

